

Bart's Pond is the small secluded body of water immediately adjacent to Coachlace Pond on the southwest side, as shown. It has long been referred to informally by Worcester County birders as "the pond that never freezes". It can be accessed by parking in the athletic field lot across the street from the school, and cutting through the woods on rough trails. Coachlace South is another somewhat larger isolated pond southwest of Coachlace Pond, closer to the railroad tracks. This pond does freeze in the winter.