Director's Note

Since the first time I read Harvey, I have felt an incredible connection with Harvey and his way of intervention. “People are people no matter where you go” but sometimes people need a reminder of the humanity that we all have in common. Sometimes we forget about how societal expectations influence our actions and the way we treat each other. In our production, we seek to unveil the human condition by deconstructing the barrier that tends to shield what is truly important to us: family, love, and acceptance. Harvey reveals himself in many ways that are sometimes obvious but more often very subtle. Whether or not you believe Harvey is real, you cannot deny the influence he has on these characters as they all discover some pieces of themselves. I believe that Harvey shows up to people who have lost their way and might be ready to start down a new path. I hope that when we all inevitably lose our way in life, we are willing to see our own six-and-a-half-foot-tall rabbit.

I have no words to describe how proud I am of everyone who has worked on this production. It has been a wonderful way to end my undergraduate career at WPI. Enjoy the show!
